By EMILE GAUVREAU

John D. Rockefeller, who gives away new, shiny dimes to many people who do not appreciate the meaning of the gifts, will be 100 years old eleven years from now, if he lives that long. He celebrated his eighty-ninth birthday on July 8, and he never nursed a dollar in the early years of his business career as much as he nurses his health today. A millionaire is as happy as his health will permit him to be, and Mr. Rockefeller knows today that, with all of his millions his health comes first. Many in this nation who are sixty-five years younger than Mr. Rockefeller, and who are spending their youth and strength recklessly, will learn this lesson of health too late.

You do not need to be rich to be healthy and health is the greatest of riches in life. More men have died from being able to buy the things they never needed than those who could not afford the extravagances of life. With all of his money Mr. Rockefeller, who can summon to his aid the greatest health experts in the world, has to follow a simple regime to prolong his existence. What he can afford to buy will not help him now.

This millionaire's greatest lesson in the world is that of thrift. Think of the new shiny dimes he gives away. Newspapers have never recorded that he gave away more than that to an individual. He followed the same principle. She did not give her money away, but she helped many an individual to find a place for himself and make his own money. And that is the best of help. Mr. Rockefeller's new dime stands for two and a half years' interest on one dollar at 4 per cent in a safe bank. Think of that when you throw a dollar away for some thing you do not need. Maybe Mr. Rockefeller thought of it when he worked for six cents an hour during his boyhood.

Now that Chicago gangsters are invading New York, the report of the Illinois Association for Criminal Justice may be of special interest to the nation. The public learns from those who prepared this report that in the "beer war" alone, 216 individuals have been murdered in four years and 160 gangsters and bootleggers have been killed by the police. In Chicago they call the bombs "pineapples," and these have been used effectively in many feuds. Crime is caused by the failure of education and industrial opportunity and by faulty economic conditions. Bootleggers will break all of the laws to see that a millionaires are served with his drinks.

A tall willowy and beautiful young actress, taking a practice flight in her traveling plane at the Roosevelt Field Flying School, alights and crashes into the Roma transatlantic plane, rather than strike and kill a pedestrian in her path. She powders her nose and is sorry for the damage she has caused to the other plane. A young lady in an automobile might have done the same thing. We will see many young ladies flying through the air in the next few years, when most of them learn that it is as easy as running an automobile, and, in many cases, much safer when you know how.

SIXTEEN MEN ON DIRIGIBLE ACCOUNTED FOR

By EUGENE LYONS
United Press Staff Correspondent
MOSCOW, July 13—(U.P.)—A tale of triumph of a sturdy Russian ice ship and hardy Soviet Seamen, scientists, and navigators over the ruthless, elemental forces of the Arctic was told in messages from the steamship Krassin in which was reported today the rescue of all known living survivors of the ill-fated dirigible Italia.

Definite Plans Of Richfield To Be Bared Soon

Shipments of gasoline stored at the Richmond terminal of the Richfield Oil company, were started yesterday with the loading of 100 cars for shipments to various parts of Northern California. L. N. Randall of the San Francisco office in charge of the local plant said yesterday that the measure was temporary and that definite announcement of future plans of the company is pending the completion of property transfer details with the Doherty interests.

The cars are being spotted by the Santa Fe company and it has been learned that the Southern Pacific company has received orders to move all tank car equipment of the Richfield company in this section of the state to the Richmond plant. These tank cars will be loaded by the Santa Fe and redistributed over the lines of other railroads to their destinations.

While confirmation of the rumor is lacking, it is said that the Richfield company plans to make Richmond the terminal for gasoline storage and shipments in Northern California, keeping the Oakland terminal exclusively for crude oil. In the event that this is decided upon, gasoline will be shipped to Richmond from the Southern California refinery by Richfield ships.

The beginning of shipments yesterday marks the first work at the Point Potrero plant since the close-down following the acquisition of the Pacific Petroleum Products company and other properties in a deal with the Doherty interests. ### PERALTA HOAX WOMAN BREAKS AI TESTIMONY

The conspiracy trial of Mrs. Bernice Hoffman, mother of the girl in the Peralta ferry death hoax, was recessed for half an hour by Judge Tyrrell yesterday following Mrs. Hoffman's collapse when damaging evidence was introduced by another daughter, Grace, when she took the witness stand.

Grace Whitte, 17, testified that on the night of April 25 she heard her sister, Isabel Robertson, the ferry hoax girl, say to her mother: "I see you tried to do me over."

The star witness against Mrs. Hoffman, who is charged with conspiracy in maintaining a fraudulent suit for $50,000 against the Key System Transit company, was Jack Altman, special investigator for a private detective agency, who lived as a boarder at the Hoffman home while he investigated Isabel Robertson's purported death.

Altman testified to overhearing the following conversation: Isabel: "I'm going to call that guy up."

Mrs. Hoffman: What guy?" Isabel: That lawyer. He's not going after it strong enough."

MONT HOLLY, N. J., July 13. —(U.P.)—Captain Emilio Carranza, his sturdy silver monoplane flaming meteor-like above a storm-raked wilderness, plunged to his death in a bog near Burlington Thursday night, less than an hour after he had started a projected non-stop flight from Roosevelt field, L. I. to Mexico City.

Returning home to a triumphal and tumultuous welcome which was awaiting him, Mexico's greatest aviator boldly drove his Ryan monoplane through a severe electrical and rain storm which broke immediately after he left Roosevelt field. Apparently his craft was struck by lightning.

Downward toward a round and tree covered wilderness, with only brilliant flashes of lightning to guide him, Carranza's plane tumbled. The pilot evidently had battled courageously to right his craft and probably did so at about the moment it thundered into the tree tops.

In that first desperate contact with death, the right wing was torn from the plane but it did not go down. At terrific speed it plunged ahead through the (Continued on Page 5)

Gasoline on the bilge water ignited from backfire as Leeds, after helping Miss Astaire into the boat, started the motors. There was a burst of flame, enveloping both, and Miss Astaire collapsed. ## MARRIAGE PROBLEMS

Dear Patricia Lee:

This is not a marriage problem, but I hope you can help me a little. My father, father and I have been living with a lady for two years. We started in as boarders and paid her weekly rent. She wanted to marry my father, but she is much older than he. She thought the best way to win him was by giving us clothes. Then later she bought a music shop which my father, a cousin of mine and myself worked for. Because she did not know how to run a shop, she sold it and moved us in the street. We had to get an apartment furniture and things to sleep on for that night. The next day she came to the shop. She started to cry and begged my father to forgive her. We, my father and I, have lived with us again. Now there is no shop, but I can't go to business, because I have to take care of the house. She is useless and lazy and gets mad at the best little thing. Please tell me the best thing to do. —RITA

Dear Rita: I think there must be a little more to this problem than you have told me. I don't pretend to understand what your business arrangements were, but considering that you and your father and cousin gave your service, I don't think the woman should have any further claim on you. However, I would advise you to get a position. You will need the feeling of independence it gives and the woman who lives with you will never do any of the house work while you are there to do it. When you are getting your own wages you can afford to make her earn her way or leave.

CONKLIN WINS STARDOM FROM STAGE RANKS

There is probably no one person connected with the motion picture industry who has had as many ups and downs as Chester Conklin, the walrus-mustached comedian who has the featured role in "The Big Noise" today only.

Conklin was one of the first legitimate actors to leave the stage for the movies and one of the first to have his name printed on the screen. As one of the immortal Keystone Cops in the early Mark Sennett comedies, his voice and antics were household talk along with those of Charlie Chaplin, Ford Sterling and others of that historic period.

Then came a lull in Conklin's screen activities. He wanted to play serious parts and producers who knew him only as a slapstick pinstriped refused to become enthused. For more than a year he left the screen entirely and returned to vaudeville rather than play in roles he did not like. Just as things looked darkest, he was signed for several pictures in succession in the character comedy. These pictures once more established him in public favor and he is now one of the most sought-after actors in the industry. His role in "The Big Noise" is said to be the strongest he has ever played and one for which he is ideally fitted.

The supporting cast of the picture includes Alice White, Bodil Rosing, Sam Hardy, David Torrance and many others. Allan Dwan directed "The Big Noise" for First National Pictures.

Other film features include "Scrambled Weddings," a comedy scream; news—pig style.

Rotary Meeting Told Members

Highlights of the International convention of Rotary clubs held last month in Minneapolis were reported to the members of Richmond Rotary yesterday in the morning session of the club meeting. The report was made by Charles S. Renwick, president and delegate to the convention.

Forty-four nations were represented at the convention by 15,000 delegates. William Cuno, former chancellor of Germany who is organizing Rotary clubs in that country, told the convention that he got his inspiration while attending Rotary club meetings in Oakland several years ago.

Henry Greger, manager of the Standard Sanitary Manufacturing company who has returned from a five-week visit to Ohio his former home, told the members of conditions in the east and declared that Ohio business men are backing Hoover for the presidency. A. C. Burdick told of his recent trip to Minnesota and Canada. Larkin J. Younce and Richard Stratton reported on their recent Alaskan trip.

School nurse says all girls should know this

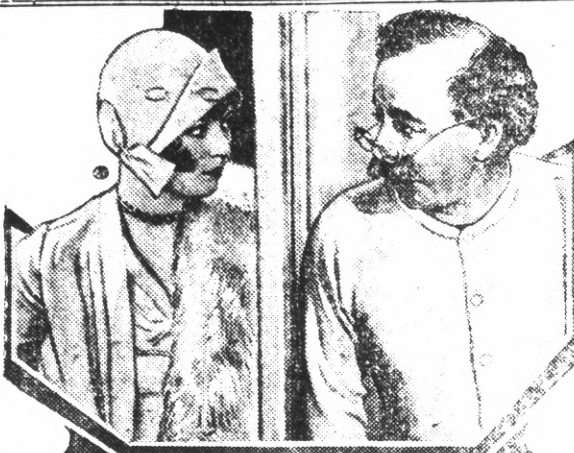

TALKING to a roomful of high school girls on personal hygiene, an experienced district nurse said: "One of the basic rules of health for girls is to keep the system functioning naturally at all times. Normal exercise and diet habits should be encouraged. But when necessary there's no harm in taking nujol, since it works mechanically and can't disturb the normal functions of any organ of the body. Particularly with girls, there are times when nujol should always be taken. Take a spoonful every night for a few days. It's a thoroughly safe and harmless method. It won't cause distress or gas pains or griping."

Nujol is different from any other substance. It contains no drugs or medicine. It can be taken safely no matter how you are feeling because it is so pure and harmless. It works so easily. Every woman should keep a bottle on hand. Every drugist has this remarkable substance. Get the genuine.

thrown on the ice from the shattered gondola.

The confused messages from the ice ship Thursday said Malgren's body had been brought aboard the Krassin. Later messages indicated he still was missing.

The Italia embassy here tonight claimed that according to reports from the Citta di Milano, the Italia's base ship, now in King's Bay, Malgren died June 15 of injuries and cold. This also was reported from the Krassin Thursday when Mariano and Zappi, with only two blankets and some rags to protect them from the cold, were seen by Chukovsky from the air and rescued by his base ship.

Chukovsky and his companions apparently are all well at their refuge where they have set up a radio, killed a bear, and looking into the future with 14 days of food supplies, unworried by fear they will not be rescued. The Krassin is reported to have picked up the airplane in which Chukovsky crashed.

Fire Liability Denied By City

PITTSBURG, July 13. —Rejection of a demand for $3,000 for loss sustained in a fire which destroyed a 4 room home and an automobile owned by him when city firemen allowed a grass fire adjoining his property to get beyond their control, as claimed by G. Nuzzio, was made by the city council last night. Nuzzio's property was at Eighth and Cumberland streets.

The action was on the advice of City attorney R. N. Wolfe, who pointed out in a letter to the council that while the fire was regrettable the city of Pittsburg could not be held liable.

TENDERLOIN

Arline de Haas

SYNOPSIS
Chuck White, member of a gang of crooks of which the Professor is leader, has fallen in love with Rose Shannon, lovely cabaret dancer. The Professor, believing Rose knows the whereabouts of $200,000 mysteriously stolen from the Mercantile National Bank, corners her in a lonely cottage where she has been staying with Chuck and his supposed "aunt." Suspecting Chuck of double-crossing them, the remainder of the gang overpower him and force him on a train. Chuck manages to escape and reaches the cottage just in time to save Rose from the Professor's lustful desires. He fires and the Professor sinks to the ground.

A little cry escaped Rose's lips. She stared at the crumpled figure on the floor. Then, as the meaning of all these sayings and events rushed through her mind she suddenly knew the truth—or at least what she could only believe to be the truth. Chuck had thought all the time that she had taken that money from the safe! His love? It had been a shallow pretence, a bitter farce. From start to finish he had betrayed her, fooled her, played with her.

Chuck, realizing that Rose believed the Professor, realizing that his actions of the afternoon had done little to strengthen her trust in him, tried to plead with her. "Rose, Rose, honey, listen! I love you, I do love you, Rose!" He Suddenly he jumped up, grabbed the little fellow, lifting him from his feet.

Caught her to him, trying to embrace her, but she only pushed him away.

"Lies, lies, lies!" she cried. "All lies, and I know it. Please listen to me." Chuck was frantic in his efforts to try to convince the girl of his sincerity.

But Rose was too blinded by the hurt to hear anything. She dashed from the room and fled towards the stairs, her broken sobs sounding pitifully. Still calling her name, Chuck turned to follow.

Down the steps she went, stopping only for an instant to snatch a coat from the hall rack as she went by. She flung open the door, and ran out into the night, Chuck after her.

A flash of lightning, and the two figures stood out for a moment, clear and distinct in the blinding light. And then they both were swallowed up in the dense blackness of the wild night.

CHAPTER XVIII
A weary, rain-soaked figure straggled into the little railroad station of Meadowvale. Silently Rose seated herself on the hard wooden bench in the waiting room. The round-bellied stove in the corner stood black and disconsolate, the empty coal scuttle beside it attesting to its disuse. Near it a box of sand, mottled with dark spots, served as a spittoon. Behind the bench several large crates and a half dozen milk cans waited for the first train out. A dismal, smacking oil lamp cast but a faint eerie glow over the room.

The grinding noise of an oncoming train caused the girl to pull her coat more closely about her and start out through the double doors. She shivered as the wind and rain caught her full in the face, whipping her all too few garments about her, chilling her through and through. Suddenly she drew back again into the shelter of the stuffy room, catching her breath sharply. There, alighting from the coach, came Molly, followed by her three companions of the evening.

As they stepped onto the platform the woman drew her hat down upon her head and over her eyes, protecting her face from the storm. The four figures started towards the waiting room. In the dim light three of them showed the results of their previous battle. The Mug's head was done up in a handkerchief, and Lefty's handsome face was marred by a very conspicuous black eye. Sparrow alone, boasted no bruises.

Looking about her frantically for a place of safety, Rose's eyes alighted on the piled boxes and the milk cans. Quickly she ran and disappeared behind them. From her hiding place she could just catch a glimpse of her former companions as they entered the waiting room. She could hear the Mug bargaining with the station master for a rig to take them back to Meadowvale Farm. Rose crouched further down, fearful lest they should discover her.

Molly, Lefty and Sparrow hung themselves on the bench, Molly heaping vituperations on the night, the weather, and everything in general. Lefty pulled a cigarette from his pocket and started to light it. The match, soaked by the rain, refused to ignite even so much as a spark, and in a rage the man threw the soggy from him, muttering to himself.

"Well, whatta a fine bunch of bums you are," Molly finally turned her attention to her two companions, gazing at them contemptuously.

"Aw, shut yer face," Lefty returned, trying to nurse his bruised and swollen eye.

"Just when we was all set, too," Molly disregarded his remarks and continued her soliloquy. "Lettin' that gorilla make a get-away like that. Say, where'd he get that gat, anyhow?"

"You can search me," Lefty replied, supporting his aching head in his hands, his elbows resting on his knees.

The conversation was interrupted by the appearance of the Mug. "Did ya get that buggy?" Molly questioned eagerly. "Jees, how I need some dry scenery."

"Yep, I'll be around" soon he'd get it ready," Mug informed her. "Hey, wot de hell we gonna tell de Prof? Ya cooked up a yab bum." Molly broke in scornfully. "You was playing nurse to him, wasn't ya?"

"Say, listen, we frisked him before we started out," Lefty retorted. "He didn't have no gat then, and I got an idea where it come from." He turned a suspicious glance on Sparrow.

The little fellow, his short thin legs stretched out before him, looked in curiosity down at his feet. He made no answer to the aspersions cast upon him.

"You kept out of Chuck's way pretty good, didn't you, Cutie?" Lefty looked at Sparrow up and down, considering his more or less immaculate appearance. He felt his own bruises and meditated bitterly upon the subject. They seemed to irritate him considerably, for suddenly he jumped up, grabbed the little fellow by the coat lapels and lifted him to his feet. In a paroxysm of rage he drew back his fist and landed a smashing blow on Sparrow's eye.

"Well, there! a sample of what Chuck give me. See how you like it?" he snarled.

The Sparrow reeled backwards, tried to retrieve his balance, failed utterly, and landed against the coal scuttle, sending it over with a harsh clatter. He lay there for a moment stunned, and then struggled to his feet, rubbing his bruise.

Lefty dusted off his hands and flung himself onto the bench beside Molly, his rage and his injuries making a strange combination of expressions on his face. As the woman stared at him, she laughed. He did look funny.

"Well, watcha giving me the merry ha-ha for," he turned on her with an evil glance. "Just wait 'til I gets my ol' pippers on that pretty boy. I'll stick my thumbs so deep in his lily white throat he won't even know where he's at."

Behind her boxes and milk cans Rose could hear the conversation, and she realized that it applied to Chuck. Ideas began to filter through her mind. Piece by piece she strung together the threads of the discourse, and decided that Chuck must have been taken from the house by force and that some place en route he had made his escape, evidently with the aid of Sparrow.

And if Chuck had escaped, she began to tell herself, surely, then, these people had come back to look for him. Lefty's threat had frightened her. Suppose they did find Chuck? What would they do to him? They seemed to stop at nothing to gain their ends. She knew that from experience. The man's next words did little to reassure her on that score.

"I'll poke his eyes out!" Lefty's rage and his anger at the trick played upon him was getting the better of him and his one idea was vengeance on the person who had caused all his trouble. "I'll croak him, I'll croak him, I'll croak him," he swore. (To be continued.)

SQUIRE EDGE GATE—The Prisoner Is a Victim of His Own Impulses and the Squire

FLYER FOUND DEAD BESIDE BURNT CRAFT

darkness a golden streak in the storm as it dashed through the tree tops for nearly half a mile. There in a tiny clearing the left wing crumpled; there the broken and burned craft shot to the ground as the flyer leaped or was thrown nearly 60 feet through the underbrush; there—where terrified berry bickers later stumbled upon his broken body—Emilio Carranza ended his triumphal homeward flight.

Carranza made a perfect take off at Roosevelt field shortly before a heavy rain and electrical storm broke. Observers at the field reported the Mexican flyer had trouble in gaining altitude after the start, but it was assumed he was speeding toward his goal today although no cities on his route had sighted a plane.

The flyer's body was hurled from his craft and was discovered by John H. Carr late today. Carr was picking berries when he suddenly stumbled upon the wrecked plane and the body. He did not investigate but hurried to Burlington, where he reported the wreck to police. Carranza was identified by a telegram found in his pocket.

The sturdy monoplane in which the Mexican pilot had flown from Mexico City to Washington last month was torn apart and buried in the mud and soft earth of the bog. The pilot's body was badly burned and mangled.

Carranza was known as the "Lindbergh of Mexico" and had many remarkable and daring flights to his credit. His projected non-stop flight from Mexico City to Washington was unsuccessful but he battled fog and rain to within a few hundred miles of his goal before being forced to land.

Capt. Carranza surprised officials at Roosevelt field Thursday night when he suddenly decided to start his homeward flight in the face of adverse weather conditions. He arrived at the field shortly before 7 p. m. and half an hour later was shooting his way to the southwest, fighting for altitude.

His take-off which was perfectly accomplished, was made against the advice of veteran pilots and officials at the field.

Carranza had reports from Washington and other points, however, which convinced him the flight was feasible, he said. Immediately after his monoplane slid over the horizon, the little crowd of watchers at the field was driven to cover by a severe storm.

WASHINGTON, July 13.—(U.P.)—Porter Adams, president of the national aeronautical association, and the Mexican government and the Mexican aeronautical association, over the death of Capt. Emilio Carranza, Mexican good will flyer.

"Carranza has done a great good for aviation in Mexico and his flight to the United States brought a feeling of good will between the two countries," Adams said.

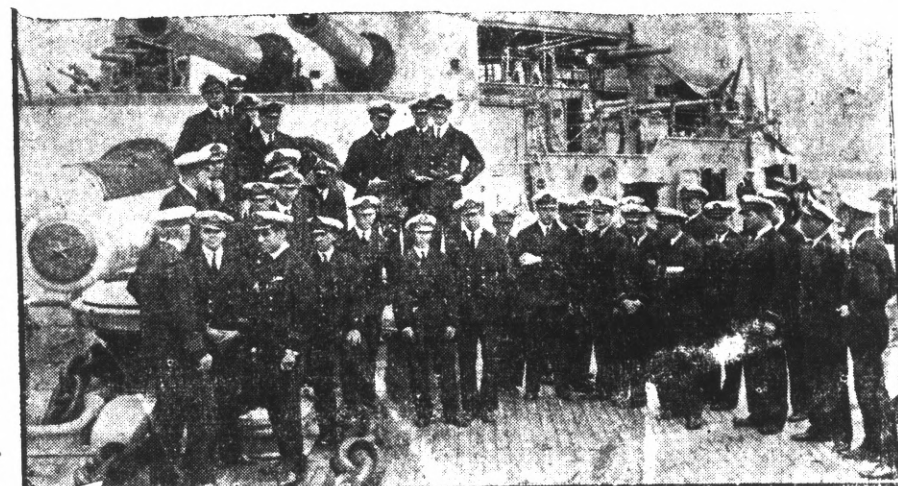

Adams related how he sat next to Carranza at a dinner in Lowell, Mass., recently.

"Now that you are the Mexican Lindbergh, what is your greatest ambition?" Adams said he asked the Mexican flyer.

ESCAPE DEATH WHEN PLANE CRASHES at air circus! While thousands attend the fifth annual air circus of the Nassau county American Legion at Curtiss Field watched with bated breath, a plane piloted by Richard Robinson nose-dived to the golf links adjoining the field and was completely demolished. Robinson, as well as his wife and six year old son, who were with him in the plane, escaped with minor injuries.

No Such Thing As Beautiful Women, U. C. Professor Says

BERKELEY, July 13.—(U.P.)—critic said.

Beauty contests are farces, because after all the degree of feminine loveliness is merely a matter of individual taste, according to Karl Albert Buehr, lecturer in art at the Chicago Art Institute, and a member of the University of California.

"There is no such thing as the most beautiful woman. One man might be able to pick out the most beautiful woman in a crowd of contestants, but she would be in all probability one of the most beautiful women to him," the art

HEN MOTHERS 'GATORS

KINGSTON, N. C., July 13.—(U.P.)—Henry Crawford, a negro, is exhibiting four baby alligators which he said were hatched by a hen on a farm near here. The 'gators are about five inches long.

Crawford said he found an alligator's nest in Pamlico county several weeks ago. He brought a number of the eggs home with him and placed them, together with chicken eggs, under the hen. The chicken eggs failed to hatch, but the little 'gators seemed to appease the mother urge of the hen.

Richfield Company Launches "Travel By Air" Campaign

Paris Will Hold Firemen Congress

TURIN, July 13.—(U.P.)—An international Firemen Congress and competition is scheduled to take place in the stadium here at the end of August or the beginning of September.

Fire extinguishing squads of several nations, bringing with them their own pumps and machines, will engage in fire-fighting contests for prizes and medals.

The final day of the congress, which will last three or four days, will be known as Fire day, and a specially constructed village in the center of the stadium will be set on fire in sections, which each of the competing squads will endeavor to extinguish. A money prize will be awarded to the most efficient squad, points being given for time and salvage operations of persons and property.

The managers of the two Italian movie houses are to direct this contest, during which realistic life-saving operations will be carried out. This sensational novelty will be performed before a large audience. Fire extinguishing operations will also be shown after bombing airplanes have ignited various parts of the center of the stadium.

Fire day will be the occasion of a national campaign warning people against the dangers of fire.

LOS ANGELES, July 13.—With big passenger airplanes now plying regularly between various cities of the West—taking on passengers, baggage, mail and even express, as regularly as though they were passenger trains—the advice of "travel by air" is by no means as far-fetched as it would have been a year or so ago. Hence the "travel by air" campaign which has just been launched by the Richfield Oil company in support of Pacific Coast commercial aviation is expected to yield real results according to aviation officials.

They declare it particularly appropriate the Richfield company should have instituted such a campaign, since it was Richfield gasoline which powered Capt. George Wilkins' successful trans-polar flight, and Richfield "Gasoline of Power" is being used in all the planes of both the Maddux Air Lines and Western Air Express air-liners, as well as the latter's famous mail planes.

Luxurious passenger planes, equipped for safe and speedy inter-city travelling take off regularly every morning between Los Angeles and San Francisco. The fare charged, it is agreed, is low, considering the immense saving of time. Planes also operate regularly between Los Angeles and San Diego, as well as the main and passenger planes which carry passengers to Arizona or Utah points to hook up with points east.

Know Children, Advice To Dads

LONDON, July 13.—(U.P.)—Fathers should spend more time in the nursery and less time in the office, Lord Astor declared in an address at Northampton during National Baby week. Fathers will learn to know their children better, and appreciate the patience that a mother must have.

The order of things was more or less reversed in his own home, he stated, when Lady Astor was taken away from her children and sent up to the house of commons. With mother away, father had to spend a little more time with the children. "At first, I was a little bit nervous about it," Lord Astor confessed, "but I found that it had certain advantages. I got to know my children better."

"Husbands too often forget the responsibilities of parenthood, and leave the children to their mothers while they go off and enjoy themselves at work."

McLarin Refuses Comment On Fight Of Tunney, Heenev

NEW YORK, July 13.—(U.P.)—Jimmy McLarin, sensational young lightweight from Vancouver, B. C., refused to make a prediction on the Tunney-Heenev bout today. Jimmy explained his stand as follows:

"I hate to make a prediction. You see I may be a champion some day myself, and I might never forgive the fellow who publicly predicted I'd lose."

Pressed for a prediction by Tex Rickard, McLarin finally ventured, "Heenev has a good chance. That's all I'll say."

Pop Foster, McLarin's manager, however, predicted Tunney would win on points.

McLarin will leave Tuesday for Detroit to prepare for his bout with Stanislaus Loayza there August 2.

BLITMAN WILL MAKE BID FOR FIGHT HONORS

By GEORGE KIRKSEY

United Press Sports Writer

Harry Blitman's shadow is across the path of Tony Canzoneri, world's featherweight champion. Practically unknown a month or so ago, Blitman is now the leading challenger for the 126 pound championship. Brought along cautiously by Max (Boo Boo) Hoff, Blitman surprised the fistie world when he defeated Canzoneri in a 10 round bout at catchweights before 15,000 persons in the Philadelphia National League baseball park on the night of June 27.

Only the insistence of Sammy Goldman, Canzoneri's manager, that the fight be at catch weights saved the little Brooklyn Italian from losing his title. Weighing 128, two pounds over the divisional weight limit, Blitman gave Canzoneri a sound thrashing, winning the judges' decision.

"From messenger boy to uncrowned featherweight champion," is Hoff's own title to the story of Blitman's career. Three years ago Blitman was a delivery boy for his father's tailor shop.

While a student at Central high school in Philadelphia young Blitman took up amateur boxing, and became so proficient that he won the national junior flyweight championship in his senior year.

Oddly enough, Blitman liked school, but he had come to a decision about his boxing and he decided to give up his studies to enter upon a professional boxing career. He made his debut as a professional against Eddie Covington at Atlantic City, July 23, 1926.

Then followed a long string of victories, including a knockout rampage in which Blitman stopped a number of good boxers. His first real test came in his eighteenth bout when he met Dave Adelman, who at that time had just been proclaimed flyweight champion of Pennsylvania by the boxing commission of that state. Blitman knocked out Adelman in the second round.

Al Corbett of Cleveland stopped Blitman's winning streak by holding the Philadelphia boy to a draw on August 24, 1927, but on the following October 4, Blitman knocked out Corbett in one round.

Weather Again Delays Fight

NEW YORK, July 13.—For the sixth time promoter Humbert J. Fugazy will attempt to stage the 15-round junior lightweight title match between Tod Morgan of Seattle, Wash., and Eddie (Cannonball) Martin of Brooklyn, former bantamweight champion, at Ebbets field, Brooklyn, Saturday night. The weatherman has interfered with all of the previous attempts to stage the bout. Morgan remains an 8 to 5 favorite.

Heenev's Mother To Hear Reports On Tunney Scrap

FAIR HAVEN, N. J., July 13.—(U.P.)—Tom Heenev and Gene Tunney will answer the going for the first round of their heavyweight title bout at Yankee stadium July 26, about 10 o'clock at night. Out in New Zealand, 12,000 miles away, it will be 3:30 in the afternoon.

Hugh and Elizabeth Heenev, parents of the challenger, will get a blow by blow account of the bout via wireless. The challenger's mother, unlike other mothers is a great fight fan. She used to attend the bouts in New Zealand and Australia when Tom was fighting there and only her age prevented her from coming to New York for the coming match.

Letter Writing Occupies Tunney

SPECTATOR, N. Y., July 13.—(U.P.)—Gene Tunney did six miles on the road this morning but called off his boxing in the afternoon. He spent most of the day answering letters which have piled up in the last five days.

Tunney received an acknowledgment of his wife to the United States Olympic team in which he wished them success.

Newspapermen took over the boxing ring in the afternoon and a bout between Ed Sullivan of the New York Graphic and Billy Wallace, Cleveland lightweight, attracted a crowd. Johnny Dundee refereed.

Ed Sullivan's SPORT WHIRL

HEENEV WON'T FORGET TOM GIBBONS

Gene Tunney will take care of his friends with the $16,400 batch of tickets he has ordered from Tex Rickard for the July 26 fight, but as yet Charlie Harvey and John Mortimer haven't filled the order from the Heenev camp.

I know of at least one fellow who will be invited to the scrap by the Heenev camp.

He is Tom Gibbons, the former St. Paul heavyweight. It was while Gibbons was in England preparing for his fight with Jack Bloomfield that he met Heenev. John Mortimer brought the big fellow to Gibbons' camp to work with the American heavyweight. "It is as hard as you can, Tommy," advised Mortimer. "I want to see if the blighter can take a punch."

Gibbons obliged. He feinted, opened up Heenev wide, and laid in a right hand with plenty of stuff on it.

Heenev granted and tore right in for more. Gibbons at that time asked Mortimer to send Heenev back to America with him. Heenev was lonesome for New Zealand and turned down the offer.

So Gibbons gave him a letter to friends in America instead. "Use that if you ever come to my country," the St. Paul heavyweight told him, "it may help you to make connections."

When Mortimer and Heenev later came to this country they found it very difficult to crash in any place.

Finally, in desperation, Mortimer went to Tex Rickard. "How do I know this fellow can fight?" asked Tex.

Mortimer pulled out his letter. "You don't have to take my word for it, Mr. Rickard, read this 'ere letter from your own Tommy Gibbons." It was Gibbons' letter that persuaded Rickard to match Heenev for his first American fight.

So I imagine that Tom Heenev will find Gibbons at the ringside on the night of July 26. "E's the sweetest fellow ever I met," says Heenev.

FISH DON'T PERSPIRE, says LOUGHRAN

Heenev has always regretted that he did not come to America when Tom Gibbons first tendered the invitation. His British manager, John Mortimer, has regretted it in particular.

The only thing that has prevented Heenev from developing a knockout punch has been the fact that he is partially muscle bound in the shoulders.

That is the joint result, so Mortimer believes, of rugby and swimming.

He feels, does Mortimer, that if Heenev had gone under the wing of Tommy Gibbons when Heenev was younger, that his shoulder blades would have become more pliable.

Heenev's passion for swimming has done more to tie up his shoulder muscles than any other thing. The last time he came over to this country he was in the ship's pool every day.

When they were selecting a training camp for Heenev, Harvey and Mortimer were particularly careful to pitch it as far as possible from salt water. That is why he is not training at Atlantic City, if you must know.

I don't know exactly why salt water swimming is more injurious to a fighter than fresh water swimming, but veteran trainers will tell you that salt air slows up a fighter.

It is easy enough to understand that swimming is no good for a fighter or a baseball pitcher, for instance. Swimming develops a set of muscles that interfere with the muscles a fighter uses in snapping a punch or a pitcher employs in throwing a ball.

Tommy Loughran, who does a lot of independent thinking, has an unusual reason for avoiding swimming to any extent.

"Did you ever realize," asks Tommy, "that swimming is the only exercise in which you cannot sweat?" He feels that in swimming he waste matter is not thrown off by the pores, as there is no perspiration.

HARD TO CONCEDE HEENEV A CHANCE

Lacking a knockout punch, Heenev will make his bid for the championship on his rugged indifference to punishment. Over a 25-round route, his ability to outlast a rival would be a serious menace but will it amount to anything at fifteen rounds?

I doubt that he has any chance against Gene Tunney. Tunney is just as strong, if not stronger than Heenev. Tunney is the cleaner puncher, and by far the harder puncher of the two.

Whether or not the champion can knock out Heenev is something else again. However, I do not believe that there is the slightest chance of Tunney losing his crown. Only a puncher can bother Tunney, and Heenev lacks the punch.

The poor we have always with us, especially the poor golfers.—Detroit Free Press.

Wisconsin is for Smith. Al is for what made Milwaukee famous, you know.—Dallas News.

Compound Interest Works Unceasingly

THE story of the child's six copper coins, unearthed from the debris of ancient Carthage, is frequently quoted to emphasize the amazing possibilities of compound interest. It has been calculated that the coins would today amount in dollars to a sum represented by 36 followed by 99 ciphers if they had been earning compound interest from the year 500 B. C. The figure is beyond comprehension, but it suggests how money grows when usefully employed. Gratifying results reward the efforts of systematic savers whose money in American Trust Company savings accounts earns four per cent interest, compounded semi-annually.

Couple Delays Wedding Kites For Two Years

MARTINEZ, July 13.—When Rev. A. A. Chapman married Miss Ruth Brister and John Bariteau of San Jose yesterday a story of perseverance was unfolded.

Two years ago on Fourth of July, while reading his paper on the front porch of his home here, the Rev. Chapman if it would be possible for them to get a marriage license that day and have the nuptial ceremony performed.

With his usual desire to help out young people about to embark on the matrimonial seas, Rev. Chapman arranged with County Clerk Wells for the issuance of the license.

But the young couple changed their minds while on the way to the county clerk's office and both the clerk and the Reverend waited in vain for the appearance of the two people.

Two years later, Fourth of July, 1928, found the Reverend in practically the same position when the two young people drove up and made themselves known. This time they told Rev. Chapman there would be no delays. The application was applied for and the services of the Reverend were arranged for July 12.

The young couple arrived on time and were married with Mrs. Lacey O'Neal and Mrs. A. Jaeger as witnesses.

They departed immediately after the ceremony for the north where they will spend their honeymoon.

The only reason the couple gave for their disappearance act was that on thinking over the matter they had decided that a small "nest egg" would be too big a detriment to matrimonial success.

Society Will

Grand officers of the society from San Francisco and San Jose will be present to give the members from various societies in the bay district. A class of 20 new members will be initiated.

A program in keeping with the celebration is being planned by the committee.

Lad Quits Hunger Strike; Dog Returns

DECATUR, Ill., July 13.—(U.P.) Oliver Tibbs, 2, son of Mrs. M. E. Tibbs of this city, who carried on a grief-stricken hunger strike for two weeks when his pet bull terrier, "Buster," disappeared, is eating again, and happy. The dog was returned to the boy after the latter lost ten pounds from his refusing to eat.

Oliver and "Buster" are the same age and most charming. The dog disappeared, and Oliver, a grumpy, stick-thin, refused to eat. After two weeks, during which physicians were unable to entice Oliver to take food, the boy's grandfather coaxed him into taking several spoonfuls of food with the promise that the dog would return on the next day. Strangely enough "Buster" put in his appearance in time to make good the promise.

Later it developed a small boy had taken the dog and given it to a man, who upon learning of the boy's sorrow, returned "Buster."

Mercy Flight Again Failure

LAKEPORT, Calif., July 13.—(U.P.)—The second "airplane flight of mercy" here this month failed today when pulmotors failed to revive John French, 8, of Oakland.

The boy fell into Clear lake near Rainbow camp at noon. He was submerged five minutes.

Answering a call for help M. Guglielmetti flew from Santa Rosa with Dr. R. L. Mateo as passenger.

The physician worked for half an hour and then pronounced the boy dead.

Early this month two airplanes came here from San Francisco in an attempt to have the life of another boy but also failed in their mission.

THOUSANDS WIN LIBERTY IN GERMANY

BY FREDERICK KUM

United Press Staff Correspondent

BERLIN, July 13.—(U.P.)—The jail doors in Germany were opened to thousands of prisoners today when the Reichstag passed by more than the two-thirds necessary majority the most sweeping amnesty bill since the success of the republican revolution.

Among those to be set free under the measure are the last of the imperial army soldiers who were sentenced by the Kaiser's court martial for desertion and other offenses.

Scores of the prisoners to benefit by the amnesty are serving life sentences, among them Max Hoelz, the communist, who in 1921 organized guerilla warfare in Saxony, and the so-called venic murderers belonging to the former black Reichswehr.

One hundred and twenty communists who were sentenced to long terms in prison for treason and conspiracy and also several radical journalists living abroad who were threatened with severe penalties for published charges that Germany possessed illegal armaments will be among those liberated.

Miss Rita Troxel, of Cisco, Texas, is visiting in Richmond with friends and relatives. She plans to return to her home in a few days.
